ASGN2 Critical Essay - SID-40231

Does decentralised governance improve organisational outcomes?

Decentralised governance moves decisions closer to the people affected by them. In this handwritten draft I argue that this improves outcomes when members share information and trust each other, but that large organisations still need a way to coordinate between units.

(Scanned from a handwritten submission.)